Dedication

What is an interval?

You smiled as you taught us that an interval is the measured distance between two sounds. Patiently you explained for the seventh time the difference between a major and minor interval.

You showed us on two December nights the thrill of communication through music in "And the Glory of the Lord."

For two delightful weeks you scorned class tradition and gave us an educational insight into the mystery of maple syrup and the taste of maple sugar candy.

You led us in prayer before chorus programs. Later we sang to our audience and gained the secret of communication between people through God.

Because you have made our interval a pleasant one, we, the class of 1970, dedicate our Laurel Wreath to you, Arnold Moshier. For in all of our discord, you liked us.

The school building stood lifeless
Like a staff without notes
A song without harmony
Until a new interval began, our interval.

We settled down to chapel,
classes, homework,
Till a question appeared in our minds.
How could we make the best of this interval in our lives?

This was our interval:
 the beginning of freshman year
 to senior graduation page one to page six-fifty-one in our physics book the sighting of a goal to its realization
 the beginning to the end of a favorite class long hours of research to the finished product two feet from a door as the tardy bell rings.

Some claimed that life is a series of inevitable events.
Others stated that a detailed routine is the formula for success.
Harmony slowly emerged from the discord.
Through the shouts and the whispers
One answer stood out:
"This interval of our lives will be measured by the success or failure we make of each day."

Faculty

Administration

Administration is a big word, a sophisticated,
impersonal word;
We knew you first as announcers of rules,
The seated men of the offices;
But as you worshipped with us, smiled at us,
Talked with us, laughed with us,
We saw behind the desks and knew
That you too are people.

Our administration has changed since last year and now consists of five persons. Noah Good does double duty as principal and dean while Howard Witmer serves as student counselor. Myron Dietz has taken the challenge of dealing with faculty-student relations. Stanley Kreider deals with the stewardship end of the administration. Clyde Stoner is continuing his work as business manager of the school.

Faculty

We were told that our faculty is dedicated. Not long did we search for proof. You influenced us in little ways:

Smiles and laughs on rainy mornings,
Taking turns in chapel messages,
Praying with us before tests,
Patient explanations of hard problems,
In little ways influencing eternity.

English

We became enthused with the plot of The Merchant of Venice, the tragedy of Julius Caesar, the thought-provoking play, "Our Town," or the adventures in Beowulf, depending on our position on the English I to IV ladder. We laughed at the limericks of poets who seemed as human as ourselves. The essays of Emerson caused us to wonder if we would ever find the meaning of life as deeply as he had. The tragedies of Shakespeare opened our eyes to the cold realities of life. English became our common ground, a subject every student had.

We learned Latin verb conjugations, long lists of German vocabulary, or sang in Spanish class to gain two years of language credit. German scholars meditated on the literature of Van Goethe while Latin scholars discovered that it is possible to translate the conquests of Julius Caesar. After listening to contemporary Spanish music, Spanish students decidedly concluded that they liked American music better.

Quadratic Quandary

Math is a cold, calculating subject which is warmed by a student's interest or a teacher's skillful guidance. Whether we engaged in factoring, finding square roots, or solving quadratic equations, math caused many to scratch their heads in the struggle for learning.

We sometimes wondered how man could do so many things in the short period since his creation. Stories of ancient civilizations delighted history fans. Balancing chemical equations or calculating the air speed of a plane flying from Allentown to Lancaster occupied our brains as we worked through the rigors of chemistry and physics. Squinting through a microscope at a fly's wing or a tiny amoeba fascinated biology students. Science is practical, a subject we can relate to our everyday lives.

Health classes became centers of interesting discussions ranging from dating to the structure of the eye. Students soon realized that memorizing the definition of an anxiety can be helpful.

"Sons of Prophets"

At LMS God became the central theme of two forty-five minute class periods a week. The flight and plight of the Israelites and the familiar New Testament stories were discussed by freshmen and sophomores. Juniors surveyed the Bible as a unified whole. Seniors originated off-the-subject discussions in Bible Doctrine classes, and with the sound of the shop classes for a background, talked about everything from courtship to feet washing.

Juniors Hike Their Way

One September morning 39 juniors congregated at LMS before sunrise. Within four hours these same juniors found themselves in Nelson County, Virginia. There the group divided into three crews: carpenters aided in the construction of a house, the "mud-crew" housecleaned a mud-covered basement that reeked of spoiled food, and the remaining relief workers sorted clothes. In the evening the mud-spattered juniors were made glad by the realization that they had helped others.

Another junior event was the hike which occurred Sunday, October 19. Condescending to ride in a cattle truck, the juniors arrived at their destination. A morning service was held on top of a hill. The hike to dinner provided for release of excess energy, which was soon replaced. Thirst plagued many as they continued on their hike. The closing feat was a climb up the fire tower. After this the weary juniors settled down in the cattle truck for the ride home.

"Demonstrators of Thy Peace"

In the exquisiteness of blooming flowers,
In the quietness of evening hours,
In the sparkling freshness of morning dew,
In the beauty of trees bringing forth their hue,
I see Thy peace.

In the gentle patter of falling rain,
In the manner the sun peeps through again,
In the murmur of brooks as they ripple along,
In the happy melody of a serene man's song,
I see Thy peace.

Why, when the earth is good
And life is to love, is there —

In the hateful look of a murderer's eyes,
In the horrible way that a sick man dies,
In the restless expression of a prodigal's face
In the conflict and bitterness of race between race —
The absence of Thy peace?

Why, when the earth is good
And life is to love, is there —

In the endlessness and raging of waging of wars,
In the hopelessness of suicides committed by scores,
In the hard-hearted rich man who refuses to give,
In the pathetic and listless who have lost will to live —
The absence of Thy peace?

Why, when the earth is good
And life is to love, is there —

In the sleeplessness of a guilty man's mind,
In the one who can't leave a bad past behind,
In the helplessness of him who can't pray,
In the one who willfully takes the wrong way,
The absence of Thy peace?

The answer lies in our relationship to
Him who makes the earth good
And life to love.

Lord, may I be a demonstrator
Of Thy peace.

Seniors View Moon Rock

We held open our eyes, scrambled out of bed, and squealed our tires in an effort to reach the Washington bound buses. People studying in the largest library in the world fascinated bookworms. To our disappointment the Senate chamber was empty. Some seniors showed their seniority by sweating up the Washington Monument at a running speed while others were content with the glory of being the first LMS seniors to view a moon stone. The wax figures of Pocahontas saving Captain John Smith reminded us of our history. Searching the faces of the ten most wanted criminals at the FBI building produced no results; no one recognized a next door neighbor. Our day was soon ended, but for all of us a renewed pride in our American heritage had just begun.

Four Mini-Practices

We practiced twenty short minutes every day
And often borrowed additional moments
From our lunch hour.
We crowded onto risers
Too short for our row lengths
And adjusted our activities
To the size of different church buildings.
Our purpose was to explore
The depths of a dynamic Christian experience
With others through music.

Helping others is a vital part of human existence. First-aiders prepare for future emergencies — broken bones and clogged respiratory systems. First Aid is a keyhole into the professional world of medicine.

This year the future nurses sold doughnuts and candles to increase their treasury and provide support for a Vietnamese child. Special speakers and films provided additional insight into the nursing career. These have started their training by making the ideals of nursing a part of their lives.

The arts of the domestic will not die while LMS retains its Needlecraft Club. The members, all of whom are girls, become experts in sewing, knitting, and embroidering.

BIRD STUDY

Bird watchers roam the less populated areas of the LMS campus in search of cardinals or some rare bird which might have wandered this far north. They whistle and warble, but, unfortunately, the birds often detect the counterfeit.

MATH CLUB

Did you know that on Monday afternoons a group gathers in room 206 to play cards? The group is Math Club and the game they play is called "Radix." The cards have numbers to various bases on them. The members also play "WFF 'N PROOF," a logic game stressing reasoning. Some high schools have "Olympic Teams" which go to tournaments and play "WFF 'N Proof." Perhaps some year Math Club will enter these "Olympics!"

FOTO FANS

Foto Fans experiment with the club camera and learn to take good pictures. Once a month they view a film; these films give instructions on good picture-taking in addition to telling a story.

Two New Happenings at LMS This Year

July 3, 1970, will be the fulfillment of a dream for approximately 12 LMS students. The group with their tour guide, Daniel Wenger, will fly to Europe for a six weeks' jaunt as part of a larger group under the Foreign Study League. They will sample Rome's pizzas, perhaps attempt Swiss yodeling, scrutinize Parisian fashions, and shiver in the shadow of the Tower of London. Collecting all their souvenirs, they will sail for home on a Dutch liner.

This year our girls organized
A varsity Basketball Team.
Long hours of work-out
Conjured up a team of which
We are proud.

Skating is an LMS sport for which there is built-in equipment. We have our very own pond. On cold, winter days our ice suffers from the cut of skaters and is dusted by the seats of defeated foes.

It's rather cold outside. No wonder Mixer needs so many shoes.

Matches Between the Gentlemen

Laughing, shouting
We watched while
Junior challenged senior,
Freshman wrestled sophomore.
In the height of an exciting game
We panted almost as hard
As the participants.

We stretched our muscles,
Strained our sides,
Or screamed till our vocal chords hurt.

Dorm students occupied their spare time by playing table games such as Monopoly. The more active ones climbed ropes and played volleyball.

Starting the Day With God

Revival meetings were held
Only one week this year.
Our evangelist was Herman Glick.
In a captivating and personal way
He presented Christ to us.
This was a time of initial
And renewed commitments.

To find God a man must search for Him. LMS gives a spiritual environment where searching for God and His will becomes easier. Here there are living examples of men and women who have learned, and are teaching, the secret of living with God.

What is the key to success? Mr. William Gothard spoke in Student Religious, telling us what memorization of the Bible had accomplished in his own life. It sounded so wonderful, but we wondered if it would work for us. Another morning Peter Dyck came to tell us about Christians in Russia.

A five-member team from South America sang and gave testimonies one Tuesday morning in January. The team consisted of three boys and two girls; two came from Brazil, two from Argentina, and one from Uruguay. One song they sang, "America Will Be For Christ" named different American countries and seemed to relate the purpose of their tour.

January 26 to January 30 was designated "Know Your Church Week." Bishop Paul Landis moderated our extended chapel services and introduced the speakers. Men representing various areas of our church spoke on early history, MCC, General Conference, the Mission Board, and Lancaster Conference.

The Dorm is a World of Its Own

Dorm life began with a lively debate over the value of continuing the literary societies. A small margin of votes saved them from destruction for this year.

Some girls experimented with illegal visits to each other's rooms during study period. A surprise open-house caught boys and girls off-guard and sent them scurrying to straighten cluttered rooms.

Prayer circle was held every evening except Tuesday. Thursday nights both dorms gathered in a conjoint prayer circle; they viewed such films as "Flipside" and "Beloved Enemy."

Dorm students were the ones who spent snow holidays at school and amused themselves with snowball battles, taffy pulls, and snowmobile rides. They experienced most keenly the extracurriculars of school life.

Our interval was measured by laughter and tears, relaxation and concentration, grades, the smile of a teacher, friends.

"Just one last pat before I go in."

Has our interval been major or minor?
 A victory or a defeat?
 The answer rings true.
 Our interval has been measured by
 The success or failure of each day.
 When high school lies in the shadow
 Of memories past,
 The triumphs of that present
 Will be built on the successes of our past.
 The harmonies and discords of our interval will remain,
 Influencing tomorrow's interval.
 The God of the past
 Will be the God of the future,
 Always faithful,
 Forever sure.

A note of thanks to all those who help record our interval:
JANET GEHMAN, Who willingly worked on Laurel Wreath over Christmas vacation.

FLOYD ZOOK, who kept us out of financial tangles.

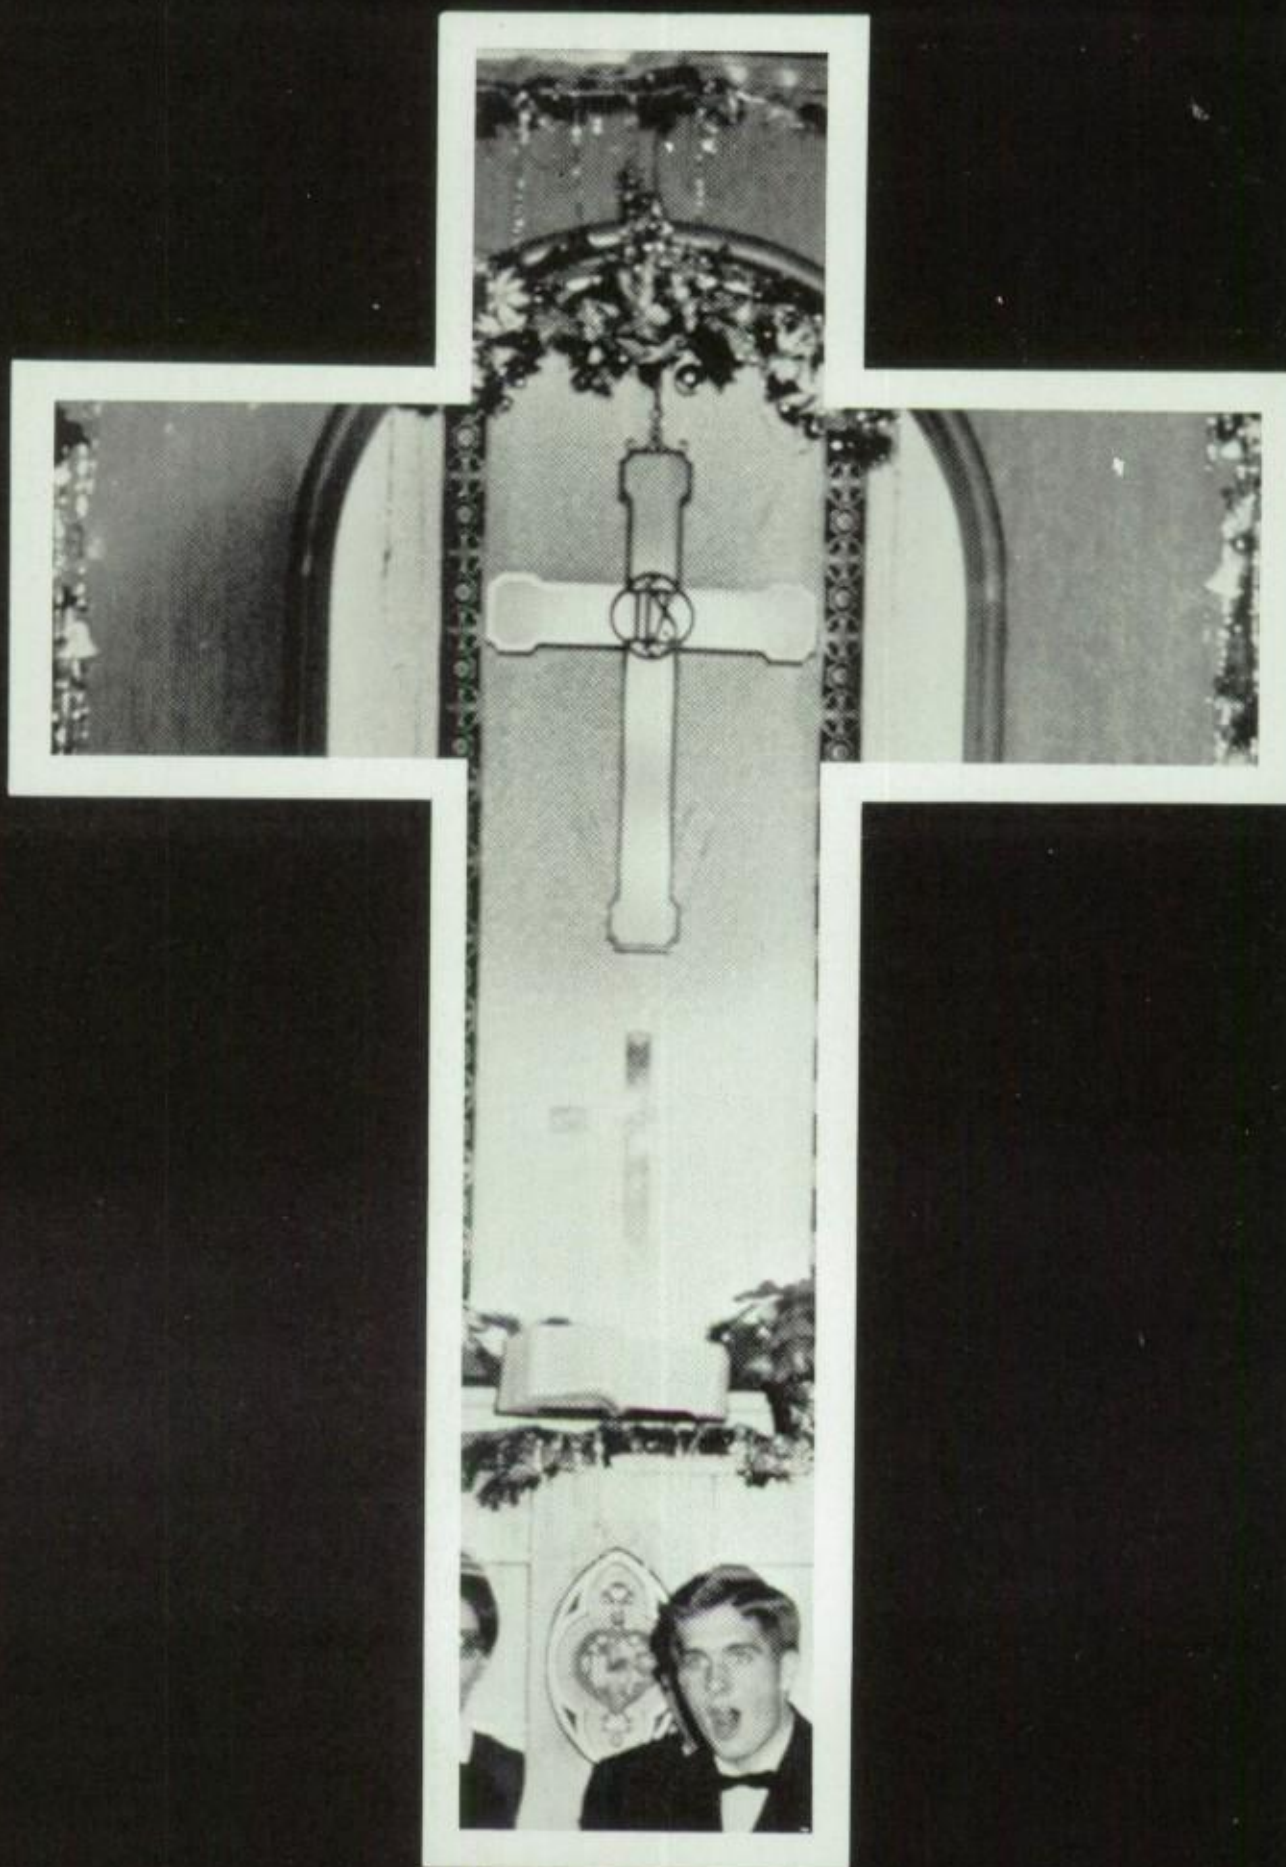

PAUL SCHLOAD, photographer from Peel's Studio, who climbed shaky ladders and walked over soggy fields to gain necessary pictures.

GLENN HERSHEY, RON KRAYBILL, PAUL KURTZ, RANDY LONGENECKER, and all others who walked the campus with ready cameras and snapped desired pictures.

STUDENT SALES CAPTAINS and SALESMEN. All students and teachers who suffered through the agonies of picture posing.

EDWARD PATRICK, representative from Taylor, who gave us welcome ideas and advice.

In Memory of

J. Nelson Weaver
(August 13, 1952 — February 13, 1970)
who gave his best.
